the 1990s, a number of studies have shown that the use of a computer-based system can improve the accuracy of data collection and analysis, and reduce the time and cost of data collection. For example, a study by [1] found that the use of a computer-based system for data collection and analysis reduced the time and cost of data collection by 50% compared to a paper-based system. Another study by [2] found that the use of a computer-based system for data collection and analysis improved the accuracy of data collection and analysis by 20% compared to a paper-based system. These findings suggest that the use of a computer-based system for data collection and analysis is a promising approach for improving the accuracy and efficiency of data collection and analysis.
